PUC'S BIOLOGY CLUB: EXPOSING PEOPLE TO THE WONDERS OF BIOLOGY

The Biology Club at PUC is all about exposing people to the wonders of biology and doing so in a way that is fun and appealing to all. Some of their events are not even biology-related but offer ways for members to take time off from their rigorous studies and have fun with fellow members. Contrary to many people's beliefs, you do not have to be a biology major or even a science major to join the Biology Club. You can just have a mild interest in biology or want to join a club to have the opportunity to socialize and have fun with your peers. The club's mission is to bring students together to experience the biology department's relaxed atmosphere and what it is like to be a part of an active club that cares for its members.

Following his graduation from PUC, he pursued advanced studies at La Sierra University and earned his master's in theological studies in 2017, followed by a Master of Divinity degree in 2019. The realm of military chaplaincy particularly captured his interest, leading him to be commissioned as a second lieutenant chaplain candidate in 2017 after a rigorous vetting process. Robert served in the reserve post-graduation while concurrently fulfilling the role of a pastor in Lake County, California. Additionally, throughout his seminary journey, he dedicated his time as a youth pastor in Long Beach.
